Pastoral Reflections....from Fr. Charles

Reflexiones Pastorales.... De P. Carlos

Remember the days (most of you probably don't remember them because you weren't around yet) when we used to say "Et cum spiritu tuo." And when we used to say "Santus, Santus, Santus. Dominus Deus Sabboth." And many other Latin phrases. We had no idea of what we were saying or singing, except that it sounded beautiful and somehow we were praising God. The music was so beautiful that it was out of this world, even though we had no idea what we were singing. There are those today who are deeply committed to this tradition, and I respect their love for the beauty and grandeur of these past times. I, too, love listening to the music written for the Mass by some of the classical composers. But the prophesy of Isaiah comes to my mind: "This people honors me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me." And then there are Jesus' words, "You disregard God's commandment but cling to human tradition." Even with our translations of the Mass today, there are some words or phrases that are foreign to us. Like, for instance, someone asked me, "Who is this 'hosanna' we talk about in the Holy Holy." And others have asked, "What does 'hosanna in the highest' mean?" I believe it is important for us to pray with understanding and to focus our attention on Jesus during the mass. The language really doesn't matter, as long as we understand. What matters is the presence of Jesus and the Communion of Saints as we celebrate the Mass and do what Jesus did at the Last Supper. Speaking as someone who started Catholic life when everything was in Latin and as a priest who was ordained only a short time after we began to speak in our own language to God, I appreciate and I love the Latin (I studied it for eight years and then never used it), and I love the traditional Latin music and the chant. But I love much more doing what Jesus did and understanding what he did and continues to do. "Hic est enim corpus meum," (the Latin words of consecration) became "hocus pocus" (because that is what they heard) to those who had no idea about what was happening. "This is my Body," (words of consecration) mean what they say. Not magic, but miracle.
